Tom Kinslow can thank Earl Wagner for his engagement by the St. Louis club. It took some of Earl's best talk to land Tom inside the Browns' tanks. Kinslow has been taking the best of care of himself lately, and if he can keep up the stride at which he went yesterday Manager Hurst is due for congratulations.

The Senators yesterday made it three straight in their series with Tim Hurst's remnants, defeating the St. Louis men by a score of 6 to 3, and taking tenth place. Jack Taylor, the Browns' crack twirler. and Dineen were the opposing rubber artists, and save in the matter of strike-outs, the youngster had the better of the argument with his seasoned rival. Both teams, however, hit the ball frequently, the home people doing so more opportunely. The visitors played with much more life than in the preceding games and were strengthened by the signing of Tem Kinslow, who backed up Taylor in good style, besides knocking out two hits out of four times at the bat. Misfortune again struck the senatorial team, Selbach spraining his right ankle badly in sliding to second base in the first inning. He was replaced by Donovan, the youngster putting up an unusually clever game in left. He captured seven files and closed the game by taking Dowd's foul fly near the fence and doubling up Taylor at first by a fine throw to Farrell. Mercer again played short, the only error of his side being a short throw by him to Farrell. For the first time in several games Reitz failed to get a hit, McGuire also failing to safely connect with the ball, although in every instance he hit it hard. Farrell and Gettman each had three hits and Anderson two, the rest of the team, with the exception of Dineen, getting one apiece.
Scoring was begun by the Senators in the opening inning. Selbach placed a single in left, but was forced at second by Reitz.

ed ankle. On Anderson's single to left Reitz went to third, scoring on Farrell's out at first. The home people added two runs to first. The home people added two runs to their score in the second inning. Mercer singled past third, Smith sent the ball past Tucker, and on Tucker's drop of Taylor's throw off Gettman's bunt Mercer scored, Smith going to third and then home on Donovan's single to center. Taylor then settled down to a wonderful extent, and the Senators failed to score again until the ninth inning. ninth inning.

Meantime the visitors had tied the score.

In the sixth inning they sent two men across the plate. Stenzel walked, and went to third on Harley's single to right. The latter was thrown out at second and Sten-

Holmes' Attorney Will Seek an In-Innetion Against Baltimore Cinh. The National League board of directors are very likely to have a lawsuit on their hands as the result of their generally condemned decision in the Holmes-Freedman controversy. Holmes, the Baltimore player, consulted legal counsel yesterday, with a view of preventing the board from carrying out the decree of suspension. Mr. Conway W. Sams, his actorney, in discussing the matter, said: "I have been looking into the law bearing on the subject, and the deeper I go the more certain I am that Holmes can premore certain I am that Holmes can pre-vent the board from depriving him of earning his living on any such ground as the one charged, and especially without giving him a chance to be heard. In fact, I hardly believe the members of the board will attempt to enforce their decree when they consider the matter and see that they are wrong. I rather expect to see some are wrong. I rather expect to see some compromise made of the whole affair that will be more just to Holmes and the Bal-timers club."

timore club."

It is likely that an injunction will be sought by Holmes, directed to Mr. Hanlon, and forbidding Holmes' suspension. The steps will probably be taken before the team leaves Baltimore next week for the west.

Holmes is receiving much sympathy, not only from the general public, but from ball Holmes is receiving much sympathy, not only from the general public, but from ball players all over the country. He has received a number of letters of sympathy from persons he never saw and yesterday got one from a lady in Philadelphia. The ball players see the possibility of danger to themselves if the board can suspend a man for practically no offense. The suspension without a hearing is especially dangerous, they think. The Chicago players are discussing the possibility of a strike of all the players if Holmes is suspended. The players are also much incensed at members of the New York team, who made affidavits against Holmes, and threaten to ostracise any such and give them no quarter on the base paths. The players are up in arms, and the club owners might find it wise to think on these things.

CHAMPIONSHIP TENNIS.

Budlong Beats Paret in Singles in Four-Hour Match at Newport. Gradually the struggle for the lawn tennis championship of America at Newport is narrowing down to the bast players of the country. Yesterday's matches at the Casino left only eight men to struggle for the final honors. Much to the surprise of those who were best informed, the two matches that were scheduled for the closest of the day, those between Whitman and Wrenn, and Ware and Millett, did not furnish any excitement at all. Both of the Harvard men won in the easiest kind of fashion, the two News Yorkers, Millett and Wrenn, being hopelessly beaten.

The feature of the day turned up in the Budlong-Paret match, which lasted for nearly four hours. IBudlong showed re-markable form at Magnolia last week, when hearly four hours. IBudlong showed remarkable form at Magnolla last week, when he won the singles from a strong field, including Ware, Fischer, Bond, Davis, and several other experts of high class, and he was thought to be too much for Paret. The New Yorker was in fine form, however, and gave an excellent account of himself before the match was over. Budlong got the first set easily, but the New York expert won the second rather handlly, and the third after the Brown man had pulled up from 5-2 to 5 all. When the fourth set began Budlong seemed to be anxious, but he kept his nerve well, and, after Paret had got a lead of 3-1, he steadily pulled out game after game until he had taken five straight and the set, 6-3, tying the score at two sets all.

Both men seemed tired after the fourth set, but they were much fresher when the last began, and the play was perceptibly better. Paret began with a rush and took three straight games before the Providence man got started.

In the next game, too, the New Yorker came twice within one stroke of getting 4—0, and once smashed a short lob so hard that it seemed sure to win the necessary point. Budiong, 'way out of court and off his feet, however, made a most sensational reach for the ball, and just managed to lob it back over the net and out of Paret's reach. This phenomenal play probably saved him the match for he won that came Dineen yesterday pitched good ball when in a hole, but took he easy at other times. Billy doubtless thought he had something easy in the Browns, and he wasn't far wrong, but with Jack Taylor in the box he had no sure victory. Pitcher Donovan simply handles himself like a ball player. Some day he will be tried on third base and a crack-a-jack will saved him the match, for he won that game and ultimately pulled out the set, 6-4. This gave him the match by three sets to two.

The day's scores follow: Championship singles (second round)—W. S. Bond beat J. D. Forbes, 6-1, 6-1; Hol-S. Bond beat J. D. Forbes, 6-1, 6-1; Holcomb Ward beat H. H. NATIONAL CROQUET TOURNEY.

The second round in the croquet tourney at Norwich, Conn., was commenced in the first and second divisions yesterday, and Strong and Duryea and Wahley have their fights still undetermined. Wahley, by miserable playing with Jacobus, lost a game to him, but as he still has an opportunity to defeat both Strong and Duryea he has a chance for the prize. Strong won games from Butler and Appar by excellent playing, giving his opponents no chances whatever. Duryea also took Butler and Sisson into camp and then closed his day's record with no defeats in the tourney play.

THE REYNOLDS MURDER MYSTERY. ew York Police Confident They Can

Prove Dentist Kennedy Guilty. The New York city police are satisfied that they have so tangled up Dr. Samuel J. Kanhedy, whom they charge with the murder of Emeline Reynolds at the Grand Hotel, that escape is impossible for him. The facts will be presented to the September grand jury, which will be asked to find a true bill against him.

The police theory of the murder, as it has been set up with the assistance of the district attorney, dismisses the robbery motive. The murderer did not, in their balief, kill the woman to get her jewelry; probably he did not mean to kill her at all. He came to the hotel to get possession of the evidence of forgery and fraud which she held in the shape of the forged check she held in for $13,000.

Kennedy wrs desperately hard up, the police say, and had been playing a dangerous game. He had got money from Miss Reynolds on pretense of putting it into race gambling in which he had a sure thing. The very day of the murder he was to get $500 from her. It was necessary for to get $500 from her. It was necessary for him to show good results from previous operations, they say, and he hit upon the idea of writing a check in the name of Dudley Gideon, hoping to convey the impression that he was Dave Gideon, the horseman, and so back up his assertion that he had a pull of the first order. He did write out the check and it worked as did write out the check, and it worked as desired. But the fraud would be discovered as soon as the check was presented, and then the game would be up.

He went to the hotel, the police say, pre-pared to get it by force, if need be. Wheth-er he dosed the woman with chloral or struck her down first, he failed to find what he was after. He thought she had the check upon her person, and she did, but so tucked away in her clothing that only when the clothing was removed for the autopsy was its hiding place revealed. Furious with disappointment, he killed her and so closed her mouth. The jewelry she wore he took as an afterthought, and fied. wore he took as an afterthought, and fled. They have half a dozen witnesses who saw Kennedy with her. He denies that he was there, and gets himself tangled up in dozen contradictory stories. They have the evidence of his underclothing streaked with lead, which they say was stained by the lead pipe with which the woman was killed. The marks are not to be mistaken,

There is still another piece of evidence which the police consider final and con-clusive. It is a torn scrap of paper found in the room where the murdered woman lay. The detectives picked it up and pasted it up with various other little scraps found in the room.

When put together they were found to make a leaf from a prescription pad, containing the printed words, "Milk of Mannesia." One scrap was missing. It was found on the fire escape, just outside the When all the pieces were put between when all the pieces were put between panes of glass and the whole turned over, upon the back of it was the name, in bis handwriting, "E. Maxwell and wife."

It was the name agreed upon by the two for the hotel registry that day. Evidently they had been in the habit of sending each other word using such odds and ender of other word, using such odds and ends of paper as came to hand.

The detectives went to his office and found the pad from which the leaf had been torn. The pad and the leaf complete the chain of evidence that Kennedy was in the hotel with the woman,
